

20 Ways to Break-Through Action

Think about a fairly major issue or decision you are currently grappling with, either in your professional or personal life. Working in this exercise, suspend early judgment, and without much thought, begin writing down the many ways you can tackle this issue - or the many ways that you can envision a solution to this situation.

All of your ideas will not "best ideas" - some may not even be a reasonably good idea; that is not the point of the exercise. The goal is to get you past your temporary "log jam" in creative thinking and get you moving towards action and a solution.

Do not stop until you have 20 different ideas
